

Each student of the Doctorate in Food Science has an academic tutor, who is also his or her thesis director. Besides, the coordinator of the doctorate program is in charge of supervising all the students enrolled in the program and gives them guidance concerning the curricula and the administrative procedures of the institution.

The thesis directors provide a personalized attention and periodic supervision to the research work of the students, guiding and cooperating with them; accompanying their academic activities, in the aim of achieving research outcomes. Additionally, the students will participate in seminars in which they will present the advances in their research and receive feedback from the members of the academic staff.
